Because they have a group of connected

We, as human beings, yearn for ways to Poetry is a lot more than just words, or sentences. It captures the essence of a soul, the emotions of their heart, and then immortalizes it forever. The Poet Tree only exists because of the names of this book. They are the branches. Every poem “Forgiveness”

By Corey LeBlanc

Forgiveness is a lesson learned a gift one must cherish, it’s based on trust one has earned ‘cause without it trust would perish.
Forgiveness is a bridge that’s built on troubled water it stands, it’s made of courage and of guilt it’s constructed by ones hands.
Forgiveness lies within the skies in heaven and in me, I know if I apologize forgiving you will be.

“I Feel. . .” by Peggy Cudmore for Gracie

I feel. . . a loss of words as I realize I’m about to be a mommy my heart throbs in anticipation of the precious life growing inside of me I have never known a love so strong and a bond so tight sometimes when I can't sleep at night I close the door and shut off the light rub my tummy and hold my baby tight I am scared of where we might be and of all the things we might need so as I lay, I begin to pray for our lord, God to find a way he will hold us both tight all through the nights when we may feel alone and things just aren't right you'll always find mommy close and never out of reach you and I will always be each other's strength when we are in need Thank you my love for giving me strength when your mommy felt like she had no way

"My Pile of Glass" by Andrew Aitken

A heart is but a piece of glass fragile as it beats it can break at anytime or come to bring you peace just know it's yours to give but watch who you do give it to the beginning might be an act next your heart's beneath their shoe

I don't want to feel this way there is nothing I can do I've fallen for this trick before because love is what I pursue I know that time heals all and heartbreaks never last I'll continue to search for you while I sweep up my pile of glass

"Re-Born" By Sandy Somodi

I hear your voice when the wind blows, I feel your touch when it rains.
I feel your warmth when the sun shines, the winters ice numbs the pain.
Although you're no longer with me I know you're still around, I take long walks after sunset and I hear your footsteps on the ground.
I sit down by the water and look into the night sky, I find the shiniest star and see the twinkle in your eyes.
I will forever miss you daily I weather the storm, but I have come to realize nature has let you, be re-born.

-In loving memory of John Frank Somodi 1957-2010

"Christmiss" by Elaine Turner

Christmas with a broken heart isn't much of a Christmas at all, on the stage it feels like I'm flying but behind the curtains I fall.

I look upon the memories of yesterday as I live with the nightmare today, on the surface I'm happy but inside I cry the day away. there's a smile behind a tear I'm happy but inside I bawl, because Christmas with a broken heart isn't much of a Christmas at all.

"Just Be" By Greg Gibson

Clipped wings and yet I still fly free, befriend your enemies, let the tensions be and just be the one to see the key to living free, which can be feeling free.
To be as real as can be you will see the real are few, but they're not far in between and when pushed into a corner it'll be like Foreman-Ali.
If you freeze in that moment take a second you'll see that it's really just your brother standing across in the ring, now can't you clearly see how unnecessary that'd be it's like getting taxed on your cut and then paying their fee.
Now feel free to disagree if you see differently because by no means do I think that I know everything, far from it actually.

There's plenty to see, especially while drinking tea, extracting DMT from the leaves, of the tree of life.

Ubiquity, is allowing me to clearly see the sea of life's energy in front of me.

Painting a scene which is too obscene to be seen, so it seems that once you see the need to achieve harmony, you'll achieve within the need to be what you're intending to be and just be.

"Lion Tamer"

by Ian Mater

She tames the lion, her whispers keep him calm with the softest of touch and the sweetest of song.

"Oh mighty lion why are you crying?

Why do you lay there in tears while you weep?"

The lion replied with tears in his eyes,

"see I have all of this power yet I am so weak"

"You are not weak you just need control" she gave him a kiss and healed the kings soul.

King of all beasts, lord of all lands brought to his knees by a warm gentle hand.

The maiden she stayed with the lion she played for she was his truest friend, and so they lived on, their love growing strong onto infinities end.

“Void”

by Adam “Toast” Middleton

This poison we call life runs through our veins the chalk outlines of people we knew and friends we loved the clock is ticking but we’re waiting for nothing as the walls are painted with passion and misery The snow falls and masks the sin we’re left hollow and cold with no place to begin our lives keep repeating and the places we’ve been we fall asleep at the wheel in hopes to find closure The music plays as the world keeps burning with silent chords to guide our way our diamond rings and silk possessions shine under the dim lit city streets while the children cry for love and attention We shower ourselves with pride as others pretend to care their downcast eyes cut through us like daggers, alone in a world of pain and agony where you can open your eyes but you can never see Our broken hearts find refuge in a life we've never lived as the tides bring forth a new concern, we stand our ground but crawl to affection only to die two feet from heaven a thread of life, a world of thoughts, one beat left from everlasting a soul divine, a tearful décor, the only way to say you're sorry the gift of lust, the open mind and the only way to tell your story.

"Dare I Dream?"

by Daniel LeBlanc

I have never felt the summers dew in the deep dark forests of Africa, never touched the sky so blue or the icy plains of Antarctica.
Unseen is the beauty that lurks amid this world forgotten of knowledge so rare; if I seek these treasures will I have gained?
Or will my repertoire still be bare?

Will I acquire the taste of all these mysteries or will the scepter-man toll too soon?

Will I find worth upon the peaks of Everest or leaping bounds upon the moon?
These questions all lead to one response which I have searched for in perfect depth tis not what one attempts to knit but the purpose for which he intends to use it.

“Some say art is dead, I say they are wrong because -Andrew Aitken it’s in you and me”

“They”
by Casseh Siena
It all began so long ago a place in my mind I dare not go but deep down I’ll always know as time goes on my pain will grow.

We’re brought into this world so young and naïve then we're taught to betray and we learn to deceive.

When we realize the truth and lose our belief, they'll tell us we're crazy and prescribe us relief.
They'll teach you to trust make you re-think your every thought, they do whatever it takes to get what they want.
They'll chew you up and they'll spit you out, they'll call you pathetic for having self doubt.
They'll tell you to stay strong and fight like a soldier, but then, put the weight of the world on your shoulder.
They'll preach about Karma how the awful will pay, but the ones who succeed carelessly cause dismay.

So surrender your words and put on that mask you hide behind because I'm not trusting anyone if I can't read their mind.

Call me cold hearted and call me unkind, but I'd rather be bitter then to live my life blind.

"I Live Not To Exist"

by Alicia Martin

I live not to exist
but persist in a better future, I take only what I need to succeed in life itself.
Trust not in what is given to you but what can you make with it, fight for those you love and in trust that is enough.

I wake from a nightmare only to find I've yet to fall asleep, through the looking glass

I reflect an inner demon

I thought was at bay.

As days blend into weeks, then years,

I ask myself. . . is this really my life?

I work, I sleep, eat, work, sleep and eat in my robotic nature I merely exist.

So when do I begin to live?

Ambition is not to be taken softly, to come from nothing and believe that it is never to change is nothing more than a cop out.

To come from wealth and believe life should come easy is nothing but selfish.

To strive and make it better only to be kicked right back down again and again,

is nothing more than courageous.

for every time you stand an outstretched hand is felt in the distance, take with it what you can advice, encouragement.

It is with these stepping tools that you are truly able to show your worth.

Writing is a way I feel it is real, and all that I know.

I fear not criticism, for this is the purest to what I have to offer,

Love life.

You cannot change me or exchange me for anyone else, all I want from life is simple to be loved, free and happy

“Silly Little Thing Called Love”

by Krysten Dawn Hare

We stood in the doorway his hand on my waist, the clock ticking loudly almost in haste.

He moved in closer

his eyes locked in mine,

I long for his kiss for one moment in time.

His lips meet mine

I feel the sensation, no longer must I wait to give into his sweet temptation.

My knees go weak

my palms become sweaty, the world disappears all that's left is him and I!

"My Escape"

by Andrew Aitken

I'm stuck in an everlasting fog in which every step takes me deeper,

I wish I could escape this place

I try to climb but my hill gets steeper.

I feel like a prisoner only bound with invisible chains getting ripped apart by everything

Soon I'll be gone with no remains.

It seems a key presented a light to fight the dark,

I think I could set this place on fire

I hope that you're my spark.

If I can't escape this place there's a place I can escape,

I close my eyes and think of this

I start smiling and life is great.

"The Host"

by Evening Giroux

Alone in the dark, resting your head silently breathing, lying in bed though you know you're alone you feel something there there is nothing but dark and a stench in the air a presence is near

it's lingering close

it's been here before you're this monster's host you must treat him well

'cause he keeps coming back night after night

it's the same old attack he lingers in close puts his hand on your head you feel teeth in your neck as he sucks out the red leaving you weak and so close to death you can't even speak you struggle for breath the room gets so cold and your vision gets hazy you already feel as though your pushing up daisies you try and inhale your mouth tastes of mud before you can think you crave human blood

"The Cycle of Life"

by Kaytee Taylor

This is the way life is you love, you smile and you live, you lose, you cry and you die, life isn't supposed to make sense.

But if everything went your way you wouldn't be the person you are today.

Everything happens for a reason

I once heard my friend say, if everything happened for a reason why is it the bad things that stay?

The bad things stay so the good things can make their way to you once they come your way the feeling of joy will stay, until the bad things come back your way.

It's like I'm stuck in a cycle the cycle of love and heartbreak, the cycle of happiness and tears,
the cycle of life.

It's just something that we're doomed to live with until we die, there will always be the bad times.

Although we think we will never see the sun rise, it rises every day.

No matter the pain, all you have to do is open your eyes and believe, believe in change and believe in forgiveness.
Sometimes a second chance is needed, because the first time around it was just too complicated.
Always forgive, never forget never have regrets and never dwindle on the past.
yes there will always be those thoughts that cloud the back of our minds, and one day they will arise and then you'll realize that's just the cycle of life.

"My Lighthouse"

by Peggy Cudmore

There were once rough waters that could not be contained, I lost myself in the maze of all those forceful waves.
The current was so strong it kept pulling me under I couldn't reach out because there was nothing to grasp.
I thought in this moment my heart won't last, so much pressure and confusion.

The wind, so strong

I thought this was where my life was ending.

Then out of the darkness came this magnificent light, all of a sudden my senses were not in a fright.

I pushed through as this strength led my way,

I'm now saved from what was my most darkest of days.

My lighthouse is now in my heart so when that dreadful darkness and confusion comes. . .

my lighthouse pierces through it all,

to keep me from drowning for now and forever more.

The "Love Tester" Sonnet

by Corey LeBlanc

Do I need a way to say I love thee?

I find my love in your eyes of hazel and other traits about your face I see such things worthy of appraisal your body is so fine, it's shape so fine the curves of your body, so like a road upon which I drive night after sweet night the first time your naked body you showed to me brought about such new sensations baffled, I knew not what to do with them like the rosebuds from the earth's gestations when you pick a rose, I'll cut off the stem my dear, I see all of this in your eyes I truly hope that our love never dies

"Tears For Grace"

by Adam "Toast" Middleton

Oh gentle day, which rains down like April showers you've taken with you a life, a friend like a starving child this pain devours our fragile hearts.
Oh quiet end,
with painful thoughts and ringing ears you've made your point that time is sparse these soothing voices are all she hears when deep inside their hope is fading.
Oh show the way, with eyes blind and feeble cores dependant on the love of others, if only life could have left her more while we're left here with tears for Grace.

-In loving memory of Grace Louise Keenan 1933-2008

"Child of Mine"

Samantha Somodi

for Alanna

10 tiny fingers and 10 tiny toes counting these is a memory I chose we share a very special bond this feeling truly is beyond each day that passes I learn about you more everything about you I certainly adore my love for you will never perish and each passing moment I will forever cherish

by Sheila Somodi

Drained of all my innocence, I looked towards the dark, wanted to find happiness but didn't know where to start.

My empty mind speaks empty thoughts, all my dreams are blank, my thoughts are just an empty sound, my head an empty tank.

Crying out loud while scratching words of hatred on my wall, running fast but way too slow, soon I'm going to fall.

Self inflicted pain leaves me useless and abused, scars upon my wrists, arms and legs I have bruised.

Useless to the world and useless to myself,

I'll kill myself, slit my wrists, and then I'll go to hell.

"Summer Love"

by Sandy Somodi

The first day I met you was the day my life began, down by the water with you hand in hand.

It's like a fairytale Hun a real dream come true,

I never knew love

until I met you.

I always miss you like crazy when you go away,

I long for your touch baby and wish you could stay.

I knew it from the start from our very first kiss, that this is for real my complete eternal bliss.

I remember walking with you through the sand,

it felt like heaven

when you stopped to kiss my hand.

Forever and always till' death do us part, you know you're the special one deep down in my heart.

by the colour of my skin or the words to which I speak, the god to which I pray or streets to which I sleep.

for who I chose to be,

for I am free.

Dawn breaks

as does the start of our millennium, where neither man nor child bears this darkness alone.

For the light shall shine, so divine,

as does the future that awaits us,

but accept that I am different

“Love is absolute

“Love Was Lost”

by Katana Thompson

Love was lost and never found because of no ones, all around.

Tie you up and hold you back until your mind begins to crack.

Then they’ll let you go, with thrill. . .

knowing your life

will never be fulfilled.

“Your List”

by Andrew Aitken

This isn’t a poem

but I’m giving you a list, of what the world sees in you or show them what they’ve missed.

You're beautiful, you're smart you're what a woman should be, you reflect that onto those around you look what you do to me.
You're more delicate than a flower with a soul stronger than a rock, the ambition of a free spirit and more reliable than a clock.
With more heat than the sun and more depth than the oceans, my love for you can start in B.C and reach the Nova Scotians.

"It Comes Like War Drums"

by Bridget K Ferguson for Matthew Cox

hard rhythmic extrusions threaten my heart escapes from behind my ribcage the thumping echoes vociferously.

my chest swelling, abounding with captured breath, unemerging clumsy hands fumble, interlocking embracing beside my cheek.

Gentle vibrations rise from within overtaking my bodies core a jubilant assonance climbs up my throat absconding from between parting lips.
His feelings indistinguishable synonymous with my own the proclamation transpires unequivocally, I love him.

“Best”

by Dane Falkiner

My best friend is dead dead to us all,
and dead most of all to me.
Standing here amidst the trees and crows I’m no longer comfortable under the boughs.
With her died all my trust, love and lust but all I can hear is how much better I need to get as a must.

I see no reason and I hear no rhyme, there is a madness to the season and all I have is time.

I've lost friends, lovers and confidants lost to the whims and whines of wants, soon my job will be done, soon the season will have won.

"Movement"

by Evening Giroux

To make a big change you don't need to be tough you don't need to be big, you don't need to be rough.

You must make a point in which all can relate to free people's minds to see we make our own fate.

We have to stand up, make our voice heard because no one can listen to an unspoken word.

We must fight for beliefs, push back with our might we are in abundance, they cower in fright.

We can only be beat, if we all give up they have us in chains, the systems corrupt.

"Us"

by Peggy Cudmore

I left so much unspoken and here we are now our love couldn't save us we were so close to having it all and I had to watch you walk away! my tears stung the skin on my face. . . the knot in my stomach was agony I would have held the cold hand of death then to have suffered in these moments Such torment. . . such pain the words my lips spoke. . .
were only a whisper of what my heart held for you we continue to hide from the light as the darkness further consumes us, my love for you will always be because it will never be over for me.

“Therapeutic Solitude”

by Adam “Toast” Middleton

Here again alone and lifeless open sores and clouded eyes, these shadows pass and turn to glass while written words drown out my sighs.

Colours fade and turn to shades as our footsteps scar through sacred canvas, knowing not where serenity dwells we'll bare ourselves and tread through seasons.

These people seek an early grave but bathe in lakes of holy water, while see-through walls hide shameful years and cellar doors hide sons and daughters.

A child is born from mothers fluids but dies before it reaches arms, like yesterday it's thrown away and guilt is buried in its place.

What's left to lose when all is lost?

and all I taste is your reflection,

I'll trek through plains of winter frost and fall asleep in your reflection.

Your porcelain smile brings solitude while choking life from satin souls, bemused and frightened you bleed your hate and translucent scars spell your glossy truth.

A vivid story in sadness wrapped hidden deep within yourself, just like a tree submersed in sap or printed truth in shallow waters.

My body dries and organs fail a thousand years can't tell this tale, the lights burn out, the curtains close eternal sleep this life bestows.

A penny for your wooden grin a dollar for your fallen friends, so take me soft into the night and sing me into a rivers end.

"A Sad Story"

by Elaine Turner

Once upon a time there was a thing called nature and we all took her for granted, we chopped down about three trees for every one that was planted.

When our ancestors looked at this land they saw a place so beautiful and vast, now the ground we use to grow our food is the same place we bury our trash.

The same water in which we need to live ends up swallowing most of our waste, it gets a little worse every day the solution!!!! hide the taste

Think of the ocean as really big bathtub, and the land spread out as your living room how long can you hide your garbage?

Before there is nothing left to pollute.

“If there is one thing you should always remember

-Andrew Aitken

it is to just live”

“I Sleep Tonight”

By Daniel LeBlanc

no wake in sight

but the dreams I dream bring terror and fright the last corpse burning

I have new vision and sight a girl, soft maiden awaits her destiny trouble and fear belate her purpose and the day will come slowly upon her surface emotions overdrawn, no world of fantasy if I shall meet this vision untrue the hand of luck shall then construe the fortune that will become of us unperceivable is the land before me the rapture so explicitly sewn for three sewn for three in years of harmony a tale only told for one a dictionary of knowledge of a new generation already begun

“Boy And The Bear”

for Ava

A Boy was trying his hardest to search for meaning in his purpose, the love in his heart was empty but hard to see on the surface.

No one knows his true feelings his heart's a room without a door, a few in the past have been inside but he wasn't taking visitors anymore.

but with dark, always comes light and every wrong will soon be right, he now has vision in his sight his whole life changed on that winter night.

Now, he can love again he will protect her from anything that's out there, she is his cub, his reason for life and every day he lives, he will love his Avabear.

"Warped And Twisted"

by Krysten Dawn Hare

Harsh words, violent blows hidden secrets, no one knows eyes are open, hands are fisted deep inside I'm warped and twisted.

So many trick, too many lies too many when's, so many why's, nobody's perfect, nobody's gifted I'm just me warped and twisted.

Sleeping awake, shakin' on a dream listening loudly to a silent scream, call my mind, the number's unlisted don't expect much I'm warped and twisted.

On my own, alive but dead look at the invisible blood, I've bled, I'm not gone, my mind has drifted you guessed it I'm just warped and twisted.

Burnt out, wasted, empty and hollow today's got yesterday's tomorrow, the sun died out, ashes sifted I'm still here, warped and twisted.

"Numb"

by Casseh Siena

Sick of feeling sorry for myself sick of blaming everyone else, I know the truth, I know it's me the one I'll never let you see.

I refuse to let my loved ones in my mind is filled with crime and sin, but it matters not because no one dares to actually show they really care.
The few that say they understand wouldn't survive a day in my hands, this emptiness that never leaves a mind that races and a heart that greaves.

Veins filled with lithium slightly tainted but still not numb, I try to find my temporary fix but no matter what this feeling sticks.
I used to dream of horror and disgrace but now I dream of a pleasant place, where I am finally set free and given back my sanity.

I awake with a smile and a blank stare only to realize my reality is the nightmare, this life I've lived, full of lies and shame but what I wouldn't give to be myself again.

It makes me sick what I've become I pray for the day that I become numb, forget all that I've suffered through and forget everything I've done for you.

Your scent I breathe within my lungs reminds me that rock bottom never comes, you just keep falling down and down and at the end there's no soft ground.

Just a pit of jagged rocks this pain you feel it never stops, you feel them pierce and rip you apart the only thing left is your still beating heart.

The only reason it is beating still?
is because you never give up the will,
the hope that, that day will come where your eyes will flicker and you'll become numb.

You'll go back to the days before drugs homelessness, crime, and useless loves, and you will finally be set free and given back your sanity.

The pleasant place behind your eyes will replace all your shame and lies, you'll forget all the things you've suffered through you'll forget all the things you did for him too.

Because those things they'll matter not your crimes and sins will be forgot, eternal slumber will finally come and you'll know what it's like to finally be numb.

"Shading my feelings

-Corey LeBlanc

hidden in bottles"

"My Greatest Addiction" by Justin Preston

Eyes shut, bodies compressed emotions flare without regret, the sound you breathe the expansion and compression of your chest, lets me know this is what's best.

The fiery heat that travels out your mouth and across my neck the rush of it all is such an addiction.

It's like nothing I've had it's become my greatest addiction, the high wears off as it comes to an end and this unknown drug is put away again.

Our eyes begin to open and this perfect fantasy just came to an end.

“The Purple Haired Girl”

by Corey LeBlanc

The morning sun had risen fast on a mountain that resembled something odd, a small lake we had just passed bearing colourful fish like cod.
But in the distance I saw a girl with hair of eggplant in every curl, complemented only by the Lilac flowers and the autumn leaves that were swaying in the breeze.
The atmosphere had some peculiar powers with a scent of lavender that came off the trees, there was a rainbow above which created peace of mind and delivered a sense of beauty, so I find.
The girls locks remind me of my child life or the skin of a well ripened grape, with her beauty that was chiseled by gods knife upon her bare shoulders, soft hair drapes.

She stood beside a bridge over water next to who I assumed was her daughter, and they simply just walked away into the distance of the sun.

I sit right here with my thoughts astray to capture that scene that had begun, for on that morning, I saw the sun rise and it brought tears, to both my eyes.

“Life Is Beautiful”

by Andrew Aitken

Life is beautiful, if you only give it a chance, what about love or the thrill of romance?

The greatest things in life are the things you embrace and bring into your life to put a smile on your face.

One thing to remember, even in the darkest of night dawn soon approaches to bring you some light, and if you look up you'll see the skies not the limit your light shines as bright as every star that is in it.

Staying true to you, that's the independence you seek and knowing yourself is the key to being unique.

If you ever feel like you're all alone, on your own, there's billions of things to do, don't be afraid of the unknown.

How will you see what you're supposed to do? If you won't even glance, see life is beautiful, if you only give it a chance.

"Work In Progress"

by Adam "Toast" Middleton

A coincidental juncture leads me down this road again a darkened past,

a jealous rage,

the notions keep evoking trends.

To pry too deep,

to pierce the hide,

turns interest into fury.

To hold your tongue,

cut out the eyes,

and silent you'll be surely.

A fortune I have squandered, a good thing never lasts, salvation lies inside the eyes of a good man who has passed.

This envy leads me far from grace an anxious wrath,

an empty cage,
my mind will never leave this place.
To scrape the soul,
to cut the ties,
turns hope into damnation.
To keep the dream, say your goodbyes
and abandon your temptation.
Forever I have wandered through emotions much too vast and found out that hope could save our lives if hope could only last. . .

“Dreamin’ Another Sleepless Night”

by Kaytee Taylor

As I lay here and stare at my ceiling I can’t help but wonder, am I dreaming?
I feel like I’m in another dimension, slowly being broken down piece by piece I’m falling to the ground.
So, what’s left now, do I put myself back together or just fall apart forever?

As I lay here I can’t help but think why do I do this to myself? I think I need a drink.

Numb the pain for the next few hours walk a mile in the rain to the nearest lighthouse tower, look over the sea and watch the shadows

I've got the key for the door in the meadow.

Lay in the grass, watch the clouds thicken thunder rolls in, everything goes quiet, eerie silence all around and within a second

I am nowhere to be found.

"Anything But Dreams"

by Dane Falkiner

Tortured by nightmarish visages and broken dreams, she cries at night for someone to come save her.

Broken and bound down by his own shame he is helpless to head her call.

Both souls yearning for the other and bound to do nothing but pine, soon some day we will give the darkness reason to whine.

We all have our strengths and weaknesses but ours is hidden well, while we get dragged on another's path straight to hell.

It's a fateful boon to love another and not to know how to say it with meaning, but I can prove to her that no time soon will I be leaving.

To save her I grit my teeth and bare our fates together ready to shoulder her slings and arrows, willing to shield her from her boogeyman just to see her smile if but for a little while.

I'll be the monster and you just be beautiful take my hand and close your eyes with me, we can go anywhere you wish, just say the words and I swear that our destination we won't miss.

you can make something appear

“A Dark Day In Sanity”

In a hollow grave lies a broken man who holds a promise, wrapped in moonlight and built with summer sands.

In a meadow beside a white house sits a memory known to no one, draped in guilt and found throughout the lands.

As we stand in herds with our plastic cups filled with confidence, we sing our thoughts and find our hearts held in other hands.

We dream this dream and bask in ignorance as words bring forth romance, we’ll mask ourselves in innocence and together we will dance.

Our eyes meet slowly as we leave our bodies to watch the city burn, it melts the skies and scolds the trees as the smoke engulfs our lives, the air is dry and the ashes rise while we listen to their piercing cries.

The windows scorched, the beauty torched, as the world meets it's cruel demise.

The clouds conform and bring the rain only to drown out the screams, the earth re-born we're far from sane and watching as the world gleams.

These markings fade as you leave my side and we go our separate ways, alone again with nothing left to get me through these hollow days.

The only thing I wanted was to sing these thoughts to you to heave my heart into your hands and make this dream come true, but hope is for the foolish and the fools are always left behind so I'll walk this road with my eyes closed and slowly lose my mind.

"Is It Wrong?"

by Corey LeBlanc

Is it wrong that I miss you?

Tell me if it's true

'cause I can't stand not knowing if you miss me too.

So is it wrong that I miss you?

Your present lays by my bed, a bittersweet reminder that plays with my head.

The memories past and the memories gone, why didn't it last?

I miss you... is it wrong?

Is it wrong? If I miss you can you please tell me so,

Will you tell me to stay?

Could you tell me to go?

Would you say nothing and turn me aside?

If I tell you I miss you, it comes from inside.

Is it wrong if I miss you?

So what if I do!

It's not like I care,

Okay, maybe it's true.

That I care for you more than the Earth does the sun,

If I tell you I miss you it's because you're the one.

"Mars" by Andrew Aitken

The beginning was surreal what happened next was bliss, the anticipation of walking then the passion of our kiss.

The road was so long and dark but I felt you light the way,

I let you in my heart and offered you to stay.

It seems that we were evident to go on different roads, to walk a different path my hope further corrodes.

The only thing I have now of you and me is this, a memory, some photos and a promise on my wrist.

For I thought that we would make it didn't think I'd end up scarred,

I don't blame you for what happened but it hit me pretty hard.

I got over you in time and I'm sure you have too, but every now and then I come to think of you.

How you might be doing?

I still today, replay the very first Hi! or how our hearts were intertwined beneath the red glow in the sky.

So now I see our heart always shining high above, that's when I have to say goodbye again to my first love.

it can be broken"

"A Thousand Moons"

by Ian Mater

A thousand moons passed in your arms fading sunsets by your side, a thousand times I've seen dawns light breaking in your eyes.

I think of this, the things I miss like looking down above you, a silent kiss, in dream state bliss to let you know I love you.

You've held my hand, we walked the lands,
over water, earth and sky.

Pray memories won't fade away dust in the sands of time.

In my heart I hold you close for dreams they do come true, and in my heart I love you most for in my dreams it's you.

Familiar ghosts under street light posts smiles scattered on the winds, your essence in the fires light the colours draw you in.

So beautiful a sight to see rare soul of rainbow flame, dance around the fires edge the colours rearrange.

“A poet I am,

but a father is the thing

I am proudest of”

I have always written poetry as a hobby but never really showed anyone, so assembling a book was a big step for me. I reached out to some of my friends and explained that I was planning to make it and invited anyone else that wanted to contribute; I was overwhelmed by the creativity that was produced and that's how “Leaves of the Poet Tree” was created.

Time is the most precious thing any of us have in our lifetime so on behalf of the branches featured in this book and everyone who helped in its creation; we thank you for taking the time out of your life to read it. In return you helped support a group of us to have our voice heard and express our feelings to you.

You have nothing to lose for writing your thoughts down. Whether it's good times or bad, writing will help you through whatever you' re feeling. You can't prove me wrong unless you try it and then when you do you' ll know what I mean.

Write something... even for yourself. you' ll be surprised what you might say.

Thanks for reading and we look forward to your submission in our next volume.

Sincerely, The Poet Tree.
